~~&~~ candy cong...

~~The plantation house sat at right angles~~
~~to~~ the main road from the main post that crossed one end of the air field & ended at the blimp hanger about a mile beyond our home the plantation house.

The house sat at right angles to the road. ~~Fac~~ with a large yard surrounded by a wide white washed board fence.

If one faced the front door there was the main part of the building was 2 story with a large portico & big tall columns ~~on~~ the ~~right side~~ left side ~~the one closest to the on the road~~ side of this center part was ~~a one story~~.

An The left + right sides were one story projections. The hyphens I'll call it them on the left closest to the road was the library a narrow porch went from the center porch along the front of the hyphen ~~to~~ around the corner to a door to the library. ~~The~~ the right side hyphen was the living room.

Going through the large front door one entered a large hall that was quite wide + went the length of the center part of the house. The living on the right the library on the left. Straight ahead ~~one~~ was the wide double doors arch to the dining room which was also the hall with of that center portion of the house. Behind that was a kitchen long + narrow that was built on because the original was widently a separate building ~~during~~ the days of the plantation ~~was~~.

The stairway was on the left near the library door + went up the back wal to another long hall ~~narrow~~ rooms because the bath rooms had been built in after the government took the house over

plus a wonderful window seat facing the front of the house + the parade ground

Mommie + Daddys bedroom was over the dining room. Betty Janet + Jimy room was on the right over the living room It had dormor windows. the guest room was over the library also with dormor windows.

Aunt Tin came once to see us. She [illegible] teacher a the [illegible]