Welcome to the Langley Research Center. Since 1917, Langley has been a major center of aeronautical research in the United States. With the coming of the space age, its research program was broadened to encompass this field. Today, Langley is a modern research laboratory, with its efforts concentrated in the fields of aeronautics and space.

The mark of Langley research can be found on nearly every aircraft and spacecraft that the United States has ever flown. This proud history — and the exciting future — are yours as well as ours.

Donald P. Heath
Director