MOON LANDING STAMPS—Frank Riggins, right, Hampton postmaster, presents a sheet of 32 10-cent air mail stamps to Dr. John E. Duberg, associate director of NASA's Langley Research Center this morning. The stamps, which bear the inscription "First Man on the Moon," depict Astronaut Neil Armstrong as he placed his foot on the lunar surface. The large stamp shows the Lunar Module on the moon's surface and an "earthrise" in the background. The stamps presented to the astronauts yesterday in Washington, are now available at local post offices. They were printed from plates made from a master die which was carried to the moon and back by Armstrong and his companion Edwin E. Aldrin Jr.
